• Can it be attached to a current structure?

Yes, the WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola is designed to be either host attached or free standing.

WeatherGuard
Motorized
Pergola FAQ

• How is Cardinal Architectural different?

We actually extrude, fabricate and powder coat all the parts to our WeatherGuard products in our factory. No one else can say that. We also powder coat our parts to meet AAMA 2604 standards.

• What colors do the WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola come in?

We offer 3 standard colors that are all stocked, white, taupe and dark bronze. We also offer over 80 custom colors.

• How will the WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola perform in my climate?

Our product is designed for hurricane strength winds and up to 50 pounds per square foot of snow. The product is also powder coated to meet AAMA 2604 standards. Combined, these things cause our product to be the most durable product you can buy.

• How does the WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola operate?

Either by using the handy remote control or by using your smart device.

• Will I need a building permit to install my WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola?

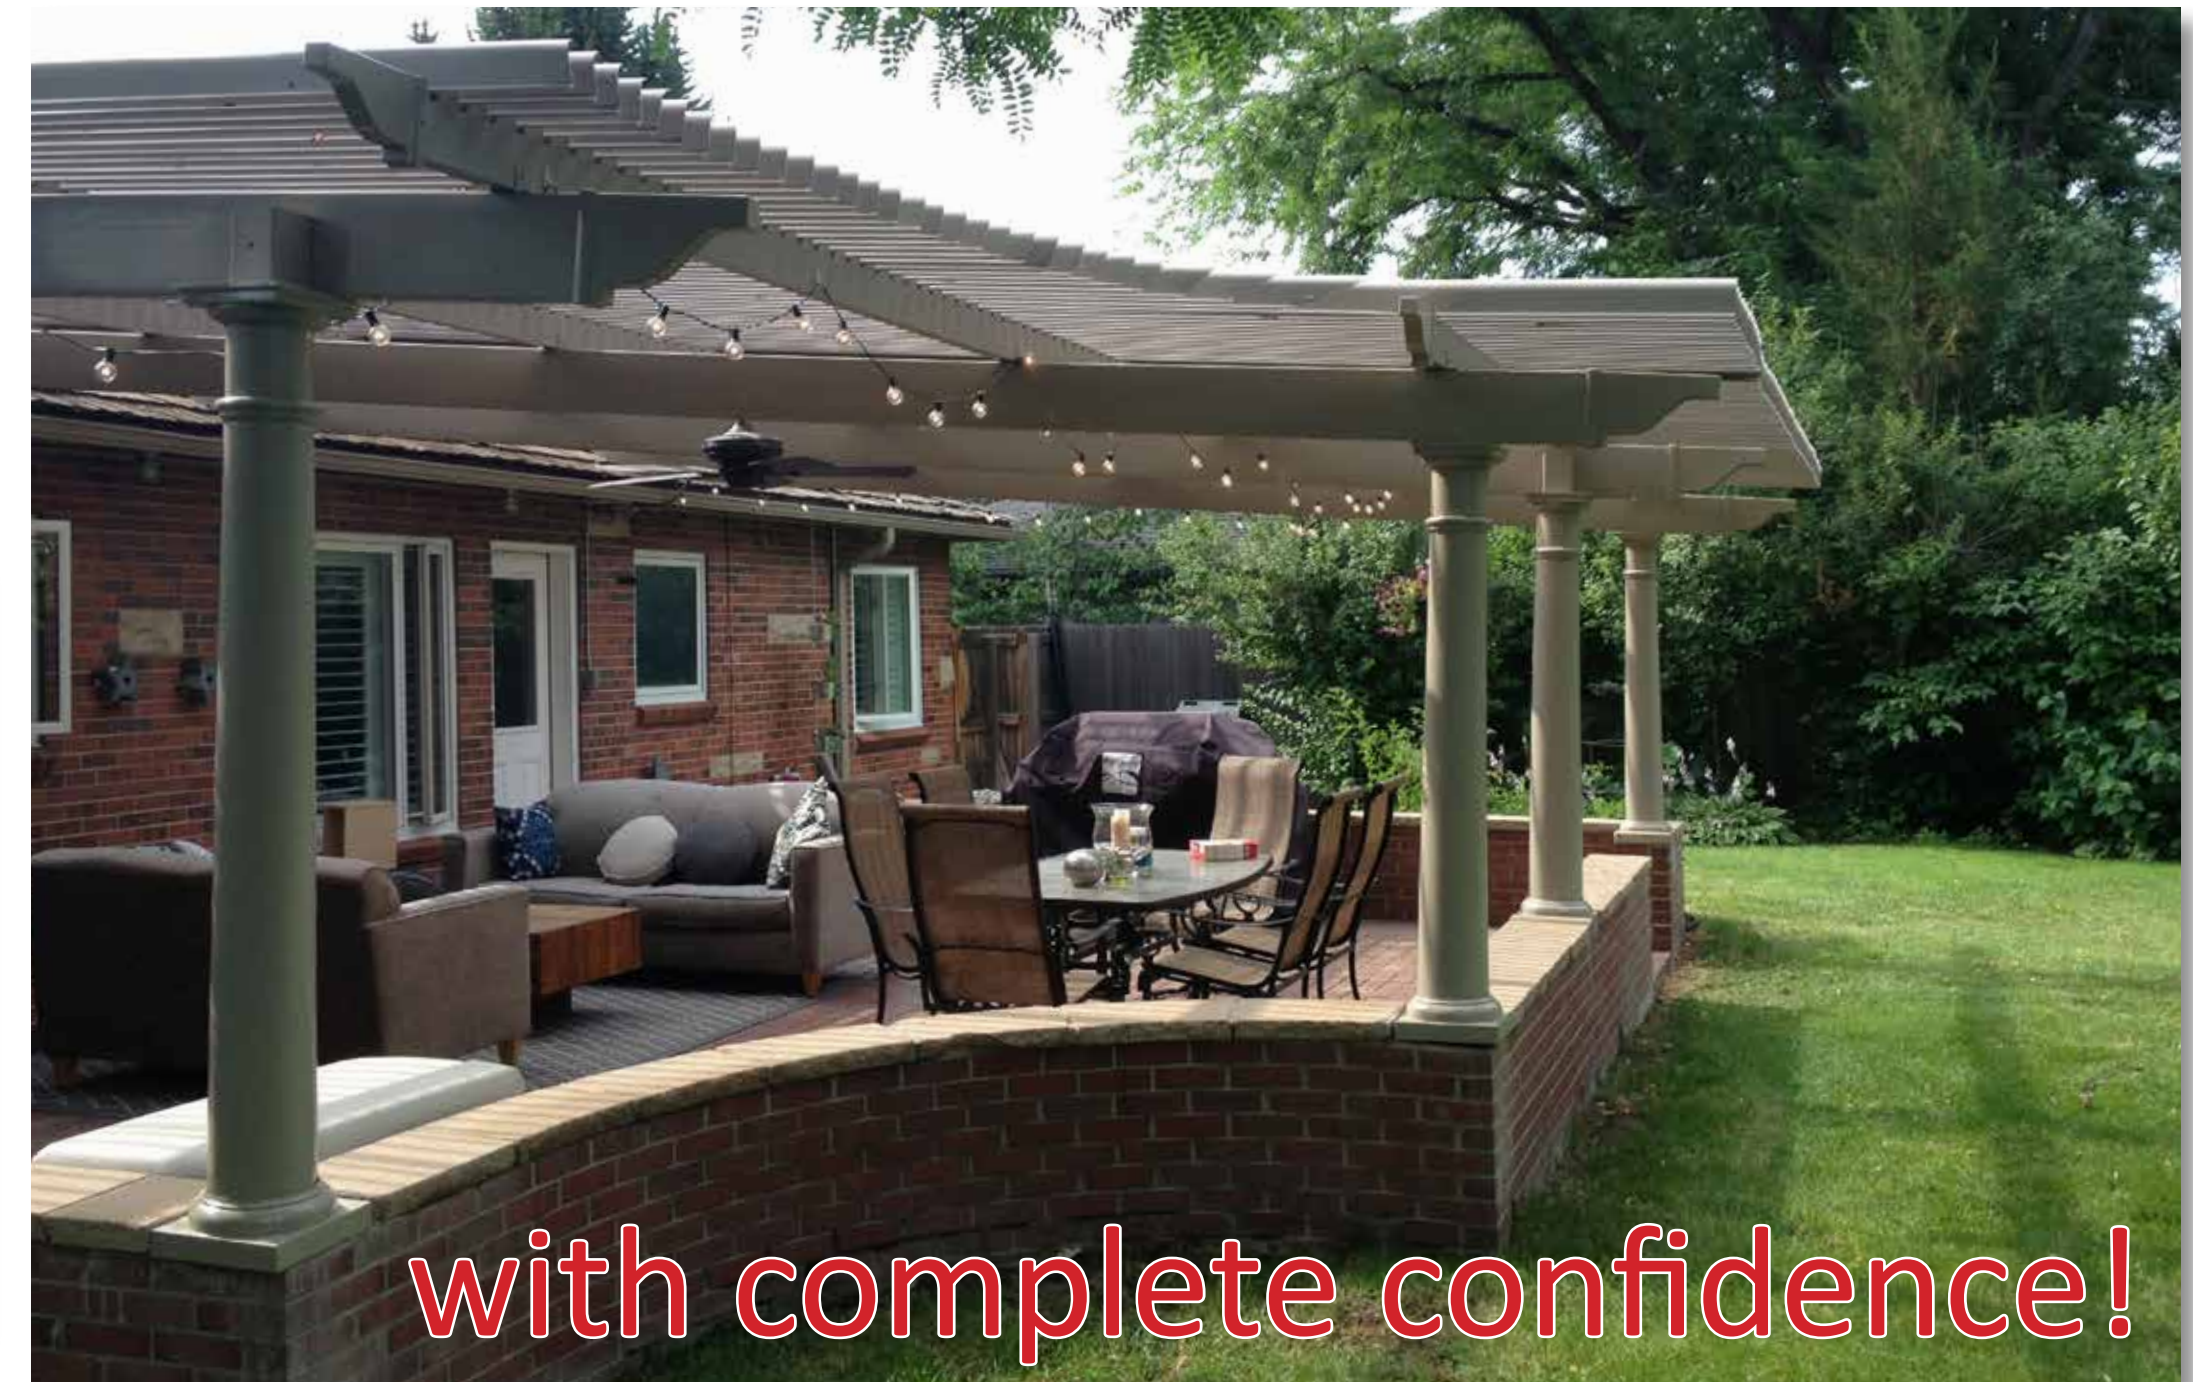

Each and every WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola is designed to meet all local building codes to insure safety and quality.

• Can the WeatherGuard Motorized Pergola cover large areas?

Cardinal Architectural has the longest louvers in the industry, 24 ft. long. Our exclusive center gutter means there is no pergola to large. The Arches National Park pergola is over 100 ft. long.
